Cops & Robbers

Theatre performance by and with Enrico Ferretti and Faustino Blanchut

The actors penetrate into the heart of physical and sporting activities, showing their comic side and denouncing their hypocrisy.

Freely taken from Enrico Ferretti's essay "Educazione in gioco", Edizioni Casagrande 2016

In collaboration with

Production Company Tiziana Arnaboldi and Teatro San Materno

The play takes place on the birthday of the two protagonists who, coincidentally, celebrate the anniversary on the same date, a few hours, but several years later. Both fans of games and sports, they meet to compare their points of view. They are convinced that despite a few minor adjustments, sport represents the most evolved form of play, complete and rich in social and educational values. In a setting imbued with imagination and fantasy, their mission is to dismantle the mechanisms of sport to highlight its most authentic nature. Do they plunge headlong into the heart of the physical activities of yesterday, today... and tomorrow with irony, comedy, firmness and without any indulgence?

The debate "Sport: guilty or innocent?" will follow.
